

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO
DEPARTMENT OF POLITICAL SCIENCE
POLITICAL SCIENCE 301

1. The first part of the course will focus on the theoretical foundations of political science, including the study of power, authority, and the state. We will explore the works of classical political theorists such as Aristotle, Machiavelli, and Hobbes, as well as modern theorists like Max Weber and Joseph Schumpeter. The second part of the course will examine the political systems of different countries, with a particular emphasis on the United States and Europe. We will analyze the structure and function of these systems, as well as the role of political institutions and actors. The third part of the course will deal with contemporary issues in political science, such as globalization, terrorism, and the environment. We will discuss the challenges these issues pose for political theory and practice, and explore possible solutions. The course will conclude with a final exam that will test your understanding of the material covered in the course.

2. The course will be taught in a lecture format, with the professor providing the main content and the students participating in class discussions and exercises. There will be several assignments throughout the course, including reading assignments, essays, and a final exam. The reading assignments will consist of both primary and secondary sources, and the essays will allow you to develop your own arguments and analyses. The final exam will be a comprehensive test of your knowledge of the course material. The course is designed to provide you with a solid foundation in political science, and to prepare you for further study and research in the field. It is a challenging but rewarding course, and we hope you will find it to be a valuable experience.
